

1) Before and after

Before meeting the Slovenian students I thought that they were a lot different from the Italian people. I thought that they were rude people who spoke a different and weird language and ate disgusting food, but I was wrong. Thanks to the "Biodiversity" project, I discovered that they are very similar to us, if not better than Italians. Slovenians have the same daily routines and speak foreign languages better than most of us. I think that the exchange experience was an experience worth living, because it made our prejudices fall and it taught us to get rid of prejudice. I recommend this activity to every student.

2) Foreign partner

Thanks to the exchange experience, I found out that Slovenians and Italians are very similar to each other. The main similarities are that they are kind people, very polite and caring; the other similarity is that both Italians and Slovenians love cooking and eating good food. Still there are some differences, that make everybody unique. The biggest difference is the language: our language is more similar to Latin, while theirs comes from Eastern-Europe. Another big difference is that they are more open-minded towards foreign people, while many Italians are conditioned by stereotypes. However, we were really curious to know each other, and we were satisfied of our meeting.
